

Meaning, love and success are among the cornerstones of a happy and fulfilled life. We feel aimless if we cannot find meaning; without love we can feel lonely and empty; and in a culture that venerates success above all else, we cannot help but long to boost our worth in our own eyes and those of others by achieving myriad accomplishments. But how can we seek out meaning, love and success, and do we even recognise them when they come along? In Challenges of Meaning, Love and Success Claus Bockmann examines our attitude to each of these vital ingredients for a happy life, reminding us of the role our own attitudes and beliefs play in shaping our reality, and how life's greatest goals and achievements are rarely the same dazzling, gold-plated aspirations which are presented to us by the media, and against which so many of us compare and evaluate ourselves. Isn't it time to look at your life anew?
